Three tips for an outstanding submission

Tell a captivating story

Our judges will review a lot of submissions. To help yours stand out, try to infuse your company's distinct voice and personality throughout your write-up. Describe your company in a way that is unique to you alone.

"Our company mission is to be more than a partner to our customers. We want to be a part of their team. We are able to do this seamlessly, solving big problems together with Google Cloud solutions."

Share various perspectives

Add depth to your submission by showcasing different voices throughout. Consider asking your CEO or founder to share your company's story from his or her perspective. Or reach out to customers for quotes and testimonials as these will bolster your accomplishments.

"Earning a specialization in G Suite has opened up countless potential customer opportunities for our company."

-Jennifer Stevens, IT Director, Company B

"Company B helped us to discover opportunities in new markets, which took our business to the next level."

-Rich Steeves, CTO, Customer B

Demonstrate the impact

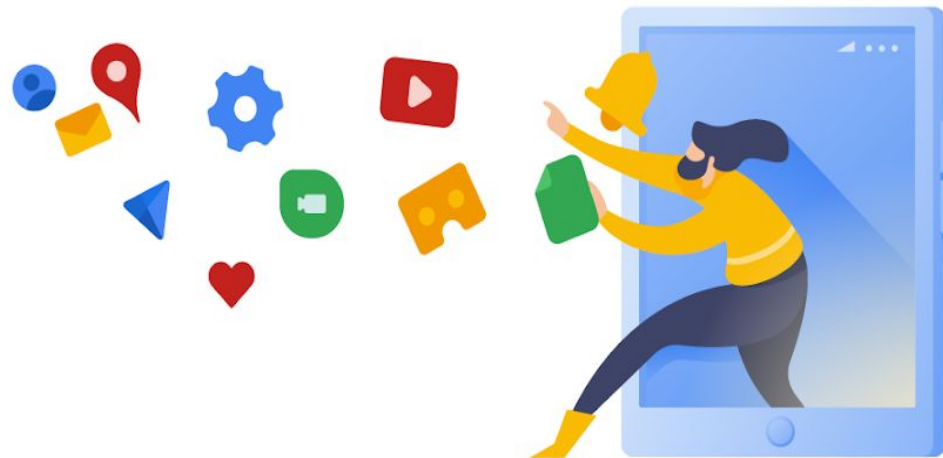

For several of the categories, the Google Cloud team will pull key metrics in tandem with your application. But we also encourage you to share metrics that demonstrate how your business innovates to make a unique impact with the help of Google Cloud technology.

"Customer C wanted to reduce deployment and other costs. Company C developed a highly innovative and effective solution using Google Cloud's ability to automatically scale computing, memory, and storage resources."
