As we look to the second half of 2020, we know it’s the right time to rethink the lead generation rulebook. We have to move away from prioritizing lead volume or lead cost to focusing on the value of each lead with the help of stronger data and more advanced automation.

The pace of change has accelerated, permanently. COVID-19 has fundamentally changed what consumers and businesses want and need. Users are more comfortable than ever doing things digitally, and they’re looking for brands to engage with them at every stage of their journey. The back and forth between online and offline touchpoints can make it hard to connect the dots between leads from your ad campaigns and final sales.

It’s more urgent than ever to invest in the final sale, not the lead. Sophisticated advertisers are making the fundamental changes to pivot away from traditional lead acquisition to intelligent lead quality, setting themselves up to capture growth opportunities in real-time.

Automation is the best way to turn more leads into sales in a dynamic market. It’s not enough to upscale your product or expand into new channels. To drive growth today, you have to capture demand dynamically. How? Our automation solutions use billions of combinations of signals to serve what matters to consumers in real-time. When you couple this privacy-protected data with the first-party data you’ve earned in building relationships with your own customers, you hold a significant business advantage: maximizing reach of your most profitable customers. Companies that integrate first-party data sources and activate it achieve up to 30% in cost savings and 20% increase in revenue. 4

Use automation to capture new growth opportunities in real-time

Three principles for lead gen excellence from the president of Google Customer solutions

Mary Ellen Coe, President of Google Customer Solutions, shares how the successful advertisers she works with are using signals and automation to create strategies that generate high-quality leads and drive business outcomes.

Key takeaways

- Revisit strategy fundamentals. Use automation to make sure your keyword, audience, and creative strategies keep up with rapid changes in consumer behaviour.
- Adopt a holistic measurement strategy. Lead gen involves complex individual journeys with a lot of touchpoints. Track what happens offline (closed sales) and use those insights to build a picture of what the high-purchase intent customer looks like. Use this information in combination with automation to ensure your bidding strategies find customers who have strong intent to purchase.
- Embed a test-and-learn philosophy. Keep up with changing consumer demand by testing new ad formats, like enabling customers to connect with you directly from your ad through new efficient, user-friendly formats.

How to spend the right resources on the best customers

In today's competitive landscape, attracting — and retaining — customers is more challenging than ever. Here's how you can ensure your offerings enable loyal customers to add more value for your business.

Key takeaways

- Unify your data to get a snapshot of your best customers: Unify your customer data by breaking down internal silos, measuring across the full customer journey, and creating dynamic customer experiences.
- Let your resources inform the complexity of your Customer Lifetime Value (CLV) model: Once you've identified what resources you can commit, you're in a better position to determine how sophisticated your model can be.
- Understand that customer lifetime value is a marathon, not a sprint: Developing your CLV model is the first step toward long-term business sustainability, but the model alone will not drive business outcomes. What truly matters is how you act on your new data.

With the launch of Local Service Ads by Google in 2018, the opportunity to generate leads under a “pay per call” model attracted Gensco, a distributor of leading HVAC brands such as Trane and American Standard, to become an early adopter of the program. Gensco partnered with SearchKings, a Google Premier Partner, to build a plan that supported Gensco’s goal of growing its market share and accelerate lead generation for independent dealers. With over 150 new advertisers joining, Gensco’s early engagement with Local Service Ads provided a first-to-market advantage. Gensco dealers who participated in the GLS program with SearchKings saw an average growth of 30% in their business year-over-year.

Target users who are active leads with more personalized advertising. Use remarketing lists for lead submissions, or upload offline ‘customer match’ lists to help prospects find the info they need to close the deal.

In this session, Google product experts walk you through how to implement offline conversion tracking using Zapier, a third-party online automation tool, so you can refine your lead quality using your company’s own signals.

- You can measure important steps of the customer journey that happen offline like closed deals or phone sales by importing those conversion actions directly into Google Ads with offline conversion tracking.
- Zapier makes it easy to import these offline conversions and significantly reduces the technical work needed to connect your CRM to Google Ads.
