Hong Kong at night is magical.

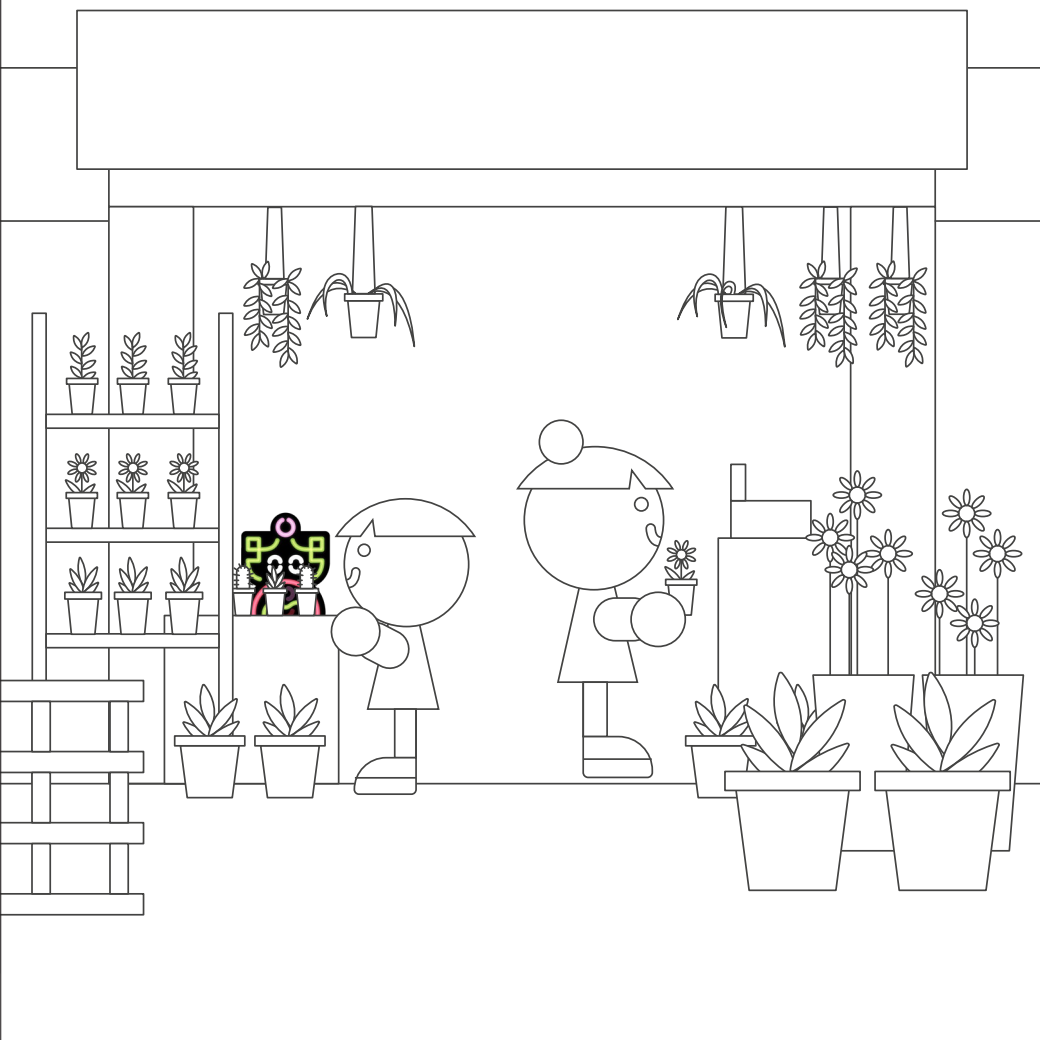

Maybe it's the smell of food – curry fish balls!

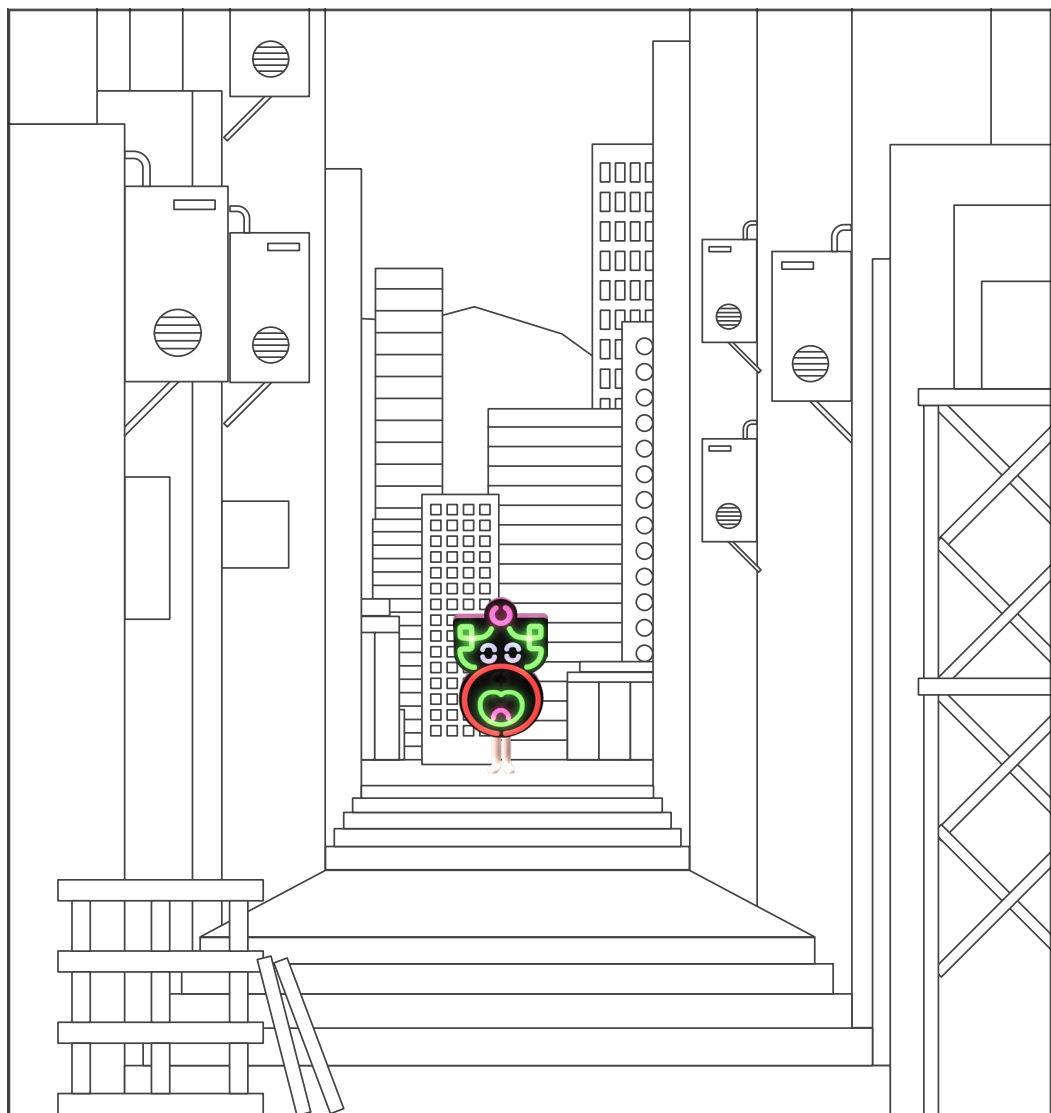

Maybe it's the people – street performers! But tonight will be extra magical.

From the corner of your eye, past the clothing stalls and the flower stands, you spot a glow.

Not bright, not dull. With every step you take towards it, the glow moves steps away.

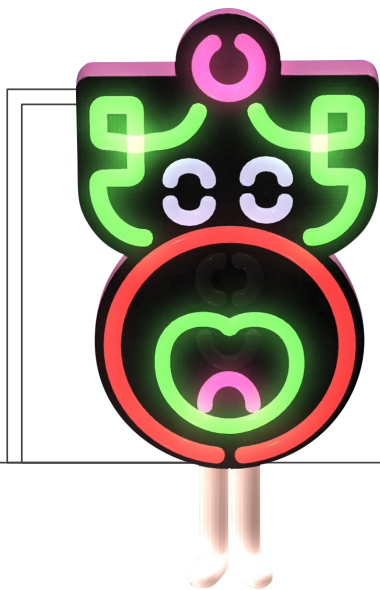

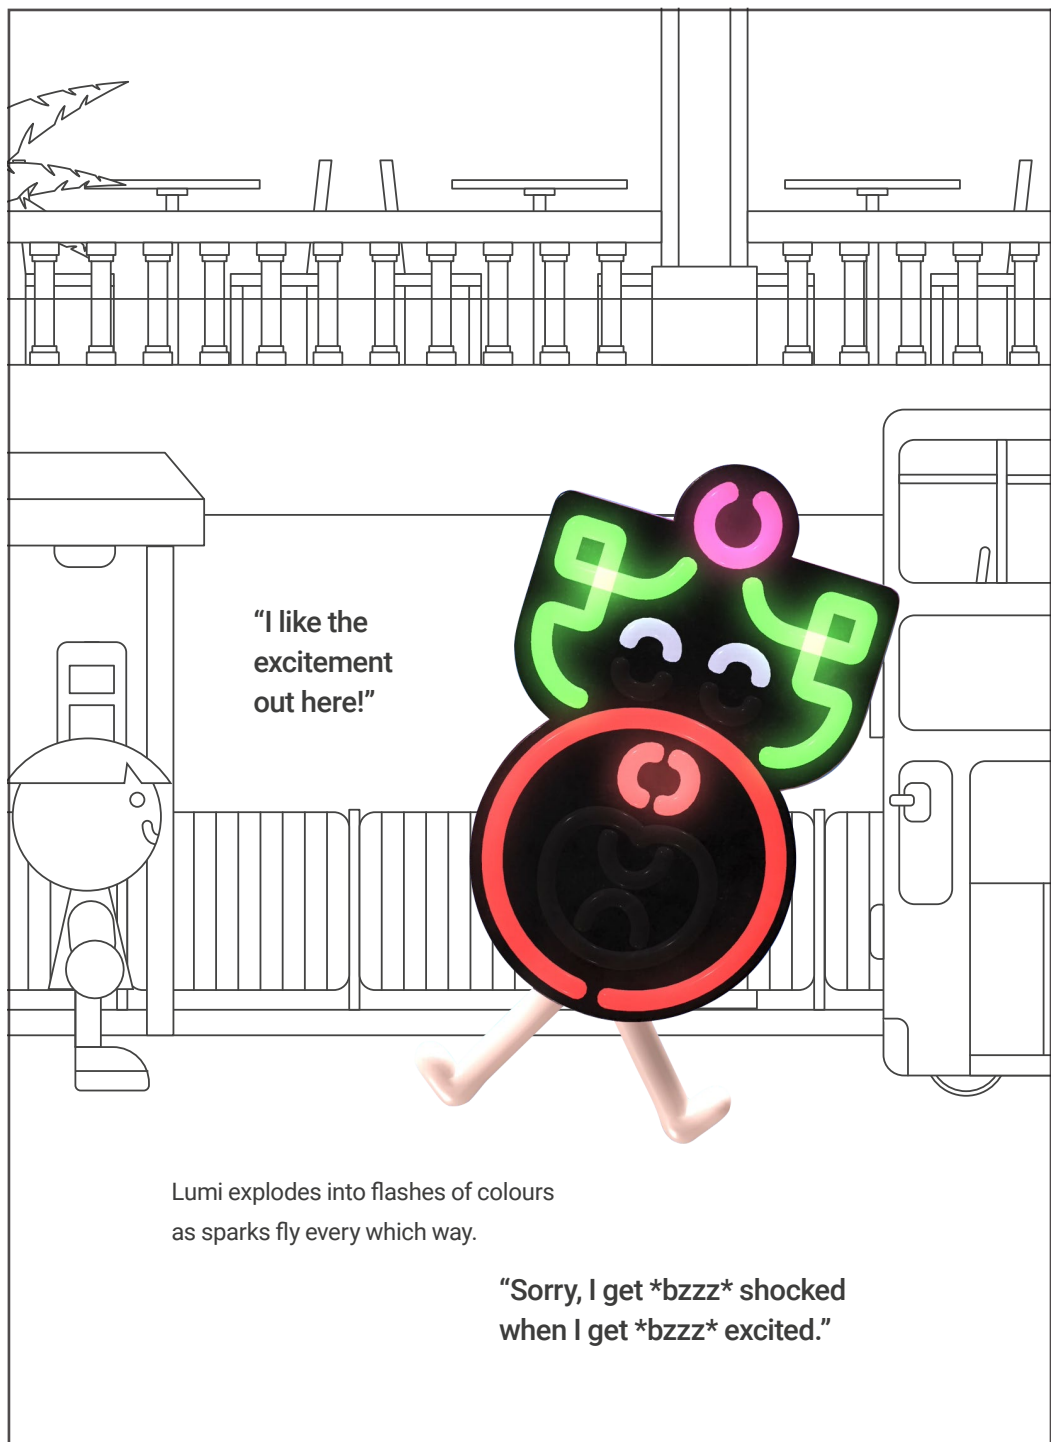

You pick up speed, cutting down a side street
then crossing a main street until you trap it down an alley – it's a neon sign.

"I'm Lumi", the neon hums sheepishly.

"Please don't take me back to the elderly home! It's boring. It's the same every day."

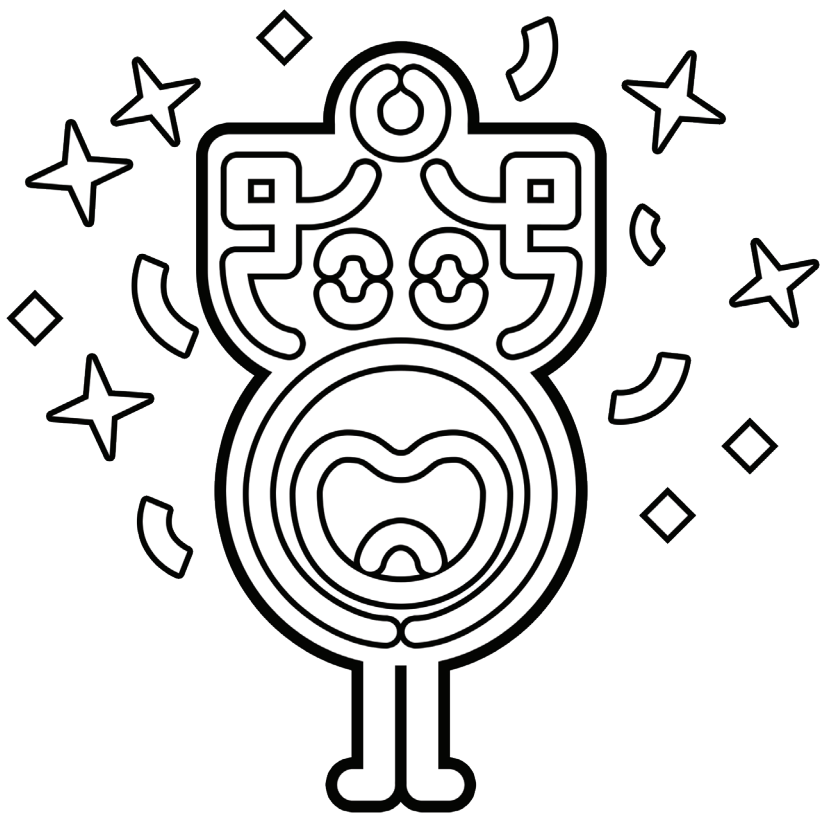

"I like the excitement out here!"

Lumi explodes into flashes of colours as sparks fly every which way.

"Sorry, I get bzzz shocked when I get bzzz excited."

Lumi wants to find those sparks of excitement that were lost while being stuck indoors for so, so long.

You can help bring Lumi's neon glow back to the city by colouring in Lumi!

The two of you set off on an adventure.
Visiting Cha Chaan Tengs, the harbourfront and more. Lumi can't contain the excitement and gets shocked all over town.

As the night winds down, Lumi leaves you with some advice, “Find your spark and shine on”. Help Hong Kong shine on by colouring in the pages.

Hiking is great!

The relaxing views, the chirping of birds...

"We're going
this way!"

a child shouts in the distance.

"No, I say we go
that way!",

a second child
responds.

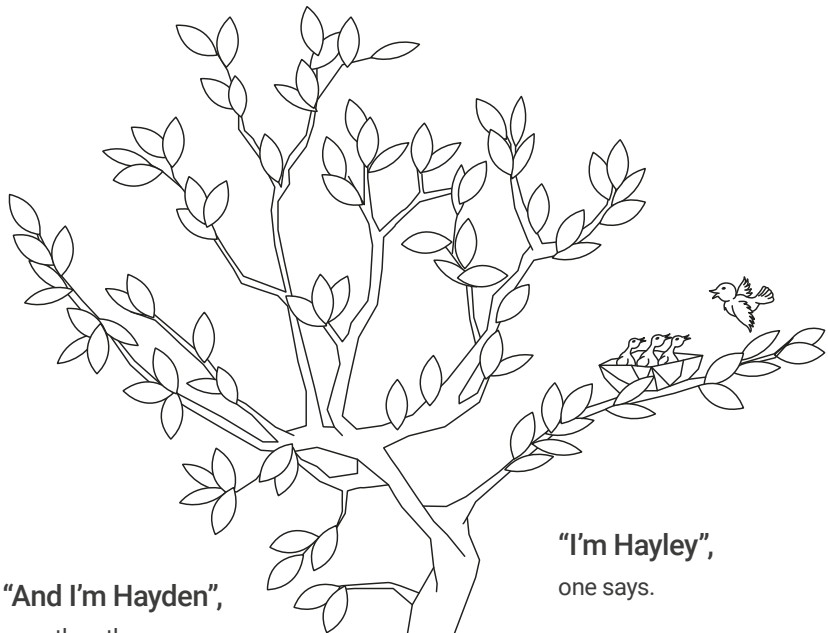

You've stumbled onto a set of twins at a crossroad, unable to agree on which way to go!

"I want to see the birds nesting on the left!", one shouts.

"No, right! There's a flower I want to see!",
the other shouts louder.

The twins have noticed you and run towards you.

“And I’m Hayden”,
says the other.

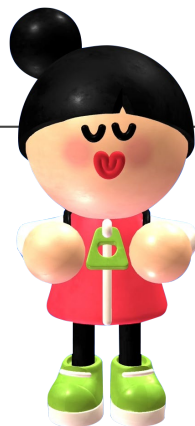

“I’m Hayley”,
one says.

"Can you help us decide which way we should go?", Hayley asks.

"Please don't interrupt! We've been stuck at home for months in our tiny room sharing everything and now this mountain too?
I've had it up to here with you!",
Hayley declares.

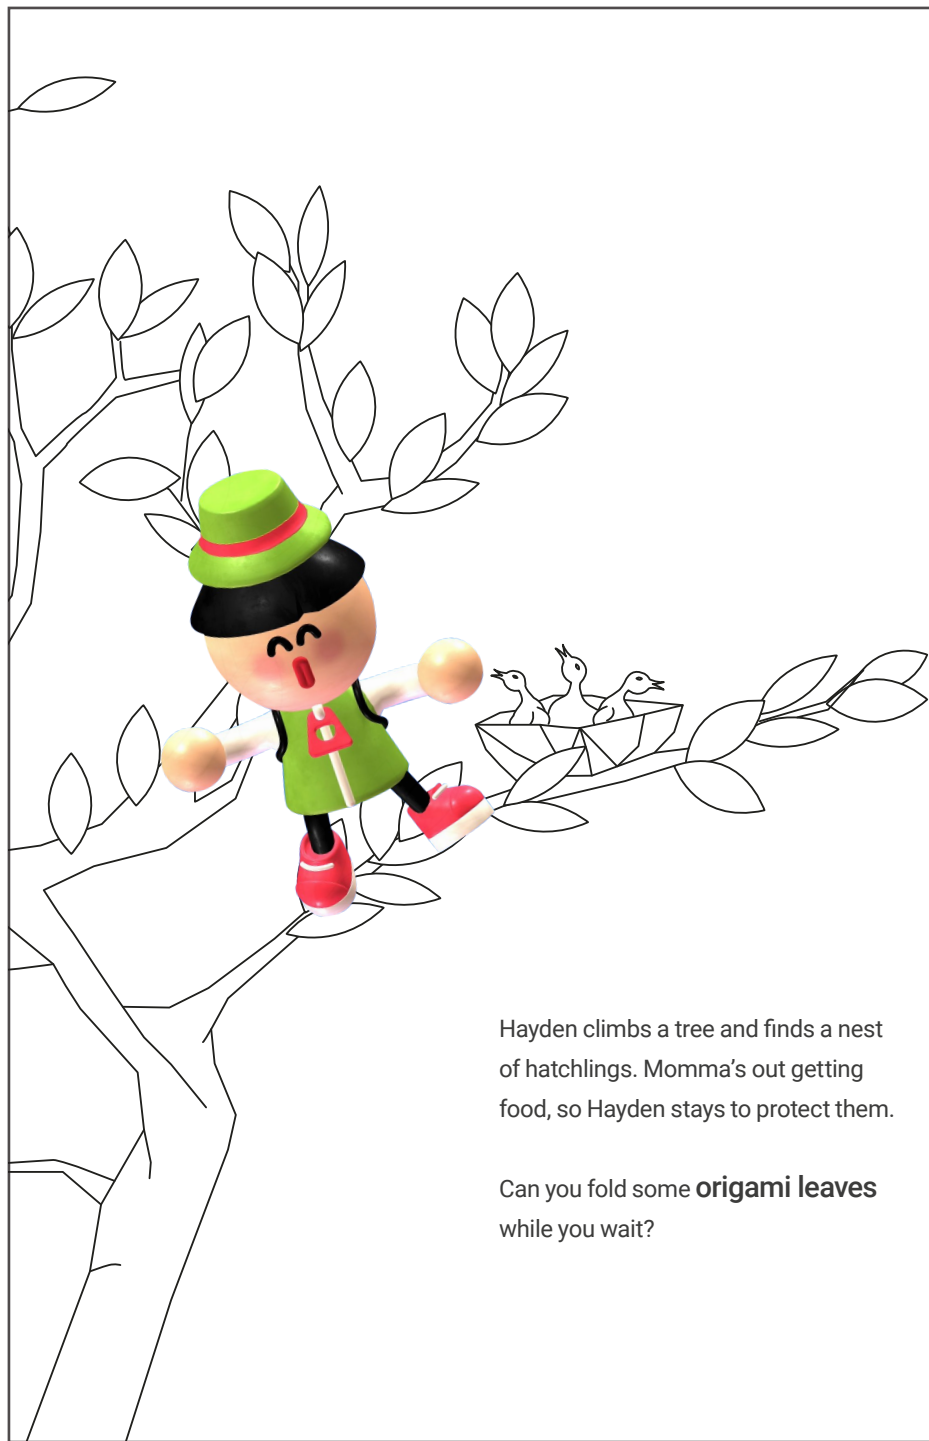

Hayden butts in,
Let's see the birds!"

"Well.. I've had it up to here and I'm 1cm taller!", Hayden boasts.

"We're here because dad says
'Make things right with a hike'!
But we can't agree on which way to go."

You suggest they go straight up the middle path.

Hayden climbs a tree and finds a nest of hatchlings. Momma's out getting food, so Hayden stays to protect them.

Can you fold some origami leaves while you wait?

This Cha Chaan Teng sure is noisy with everyone talking at the same time. You pick up conversations here and there. Sports scores. Celebrity gossip.

"Watch it!",
the cook commands.

Suddenly, a commotion from the kitchen.

Yelling.

Clanging.

"Behind you!", a waiter yells,
fighting to balance a cup of milk tea.

It won't stop shaking or swaying. The waiter places the cup in front of you, flicks milk tea from his fingers then turns around in defeat.

You study the tea. Calm. Nothing special about this...

Bursting to life and hasty conversation, this milk tea is special! You make out a few words from its rapid chatter.

Can you find those words in the word search?

Fa Yuen Street, the place to be when you're craving the best street food.

Stinky tofu anyone?

The street is packed, but one stall is particularly busy.
Some in the crowd are on tippy toes and kids sit high on dads' shoulders. What treat are people waiting for?

You inch your way through the crowd to find a stick of fish balls bouncing happily all over a painting canvas. In the mess of colours – yellow curry, red chili oil, black bean paste and more – you can make out an image of a hamburger. It painted a portrait!

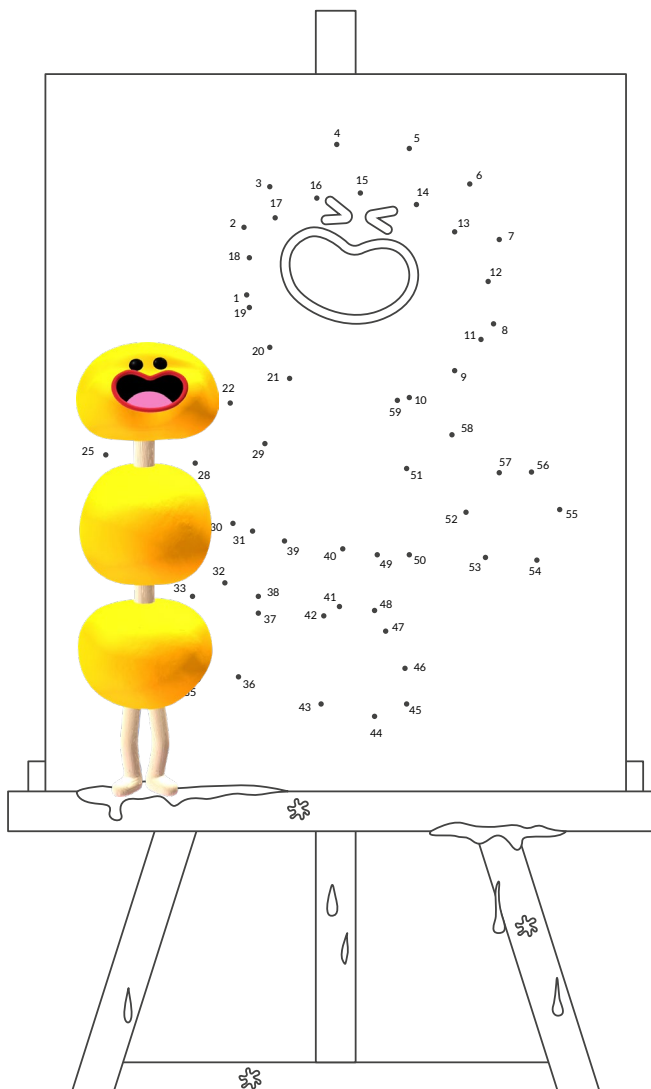

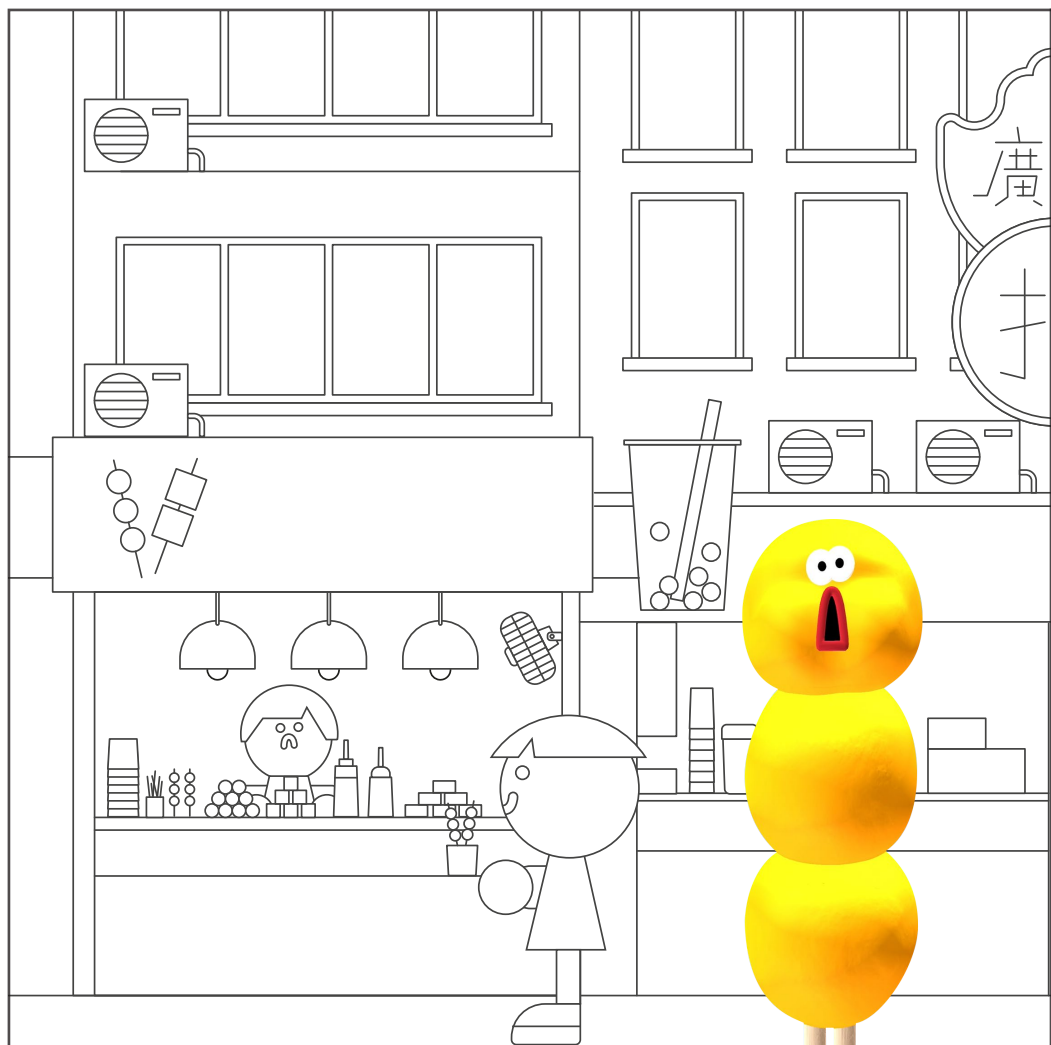

The stick of fish balls gestures towards you and says,
"I'm DanDan, let me paint you next."

DanDan begins bouncing up and down, applying colours here and there.

"A stick of fish balls that can paint? Bet you've never seen this before!"

DanDan exclaims. "I call it bounce-painting. It lets me work out my dan-sing
so I stay calm and relaxed, especially since being stuck inside has made me extra restless these days."

"I come outside an hour a day and bounce. I'm happy, people are happy!"

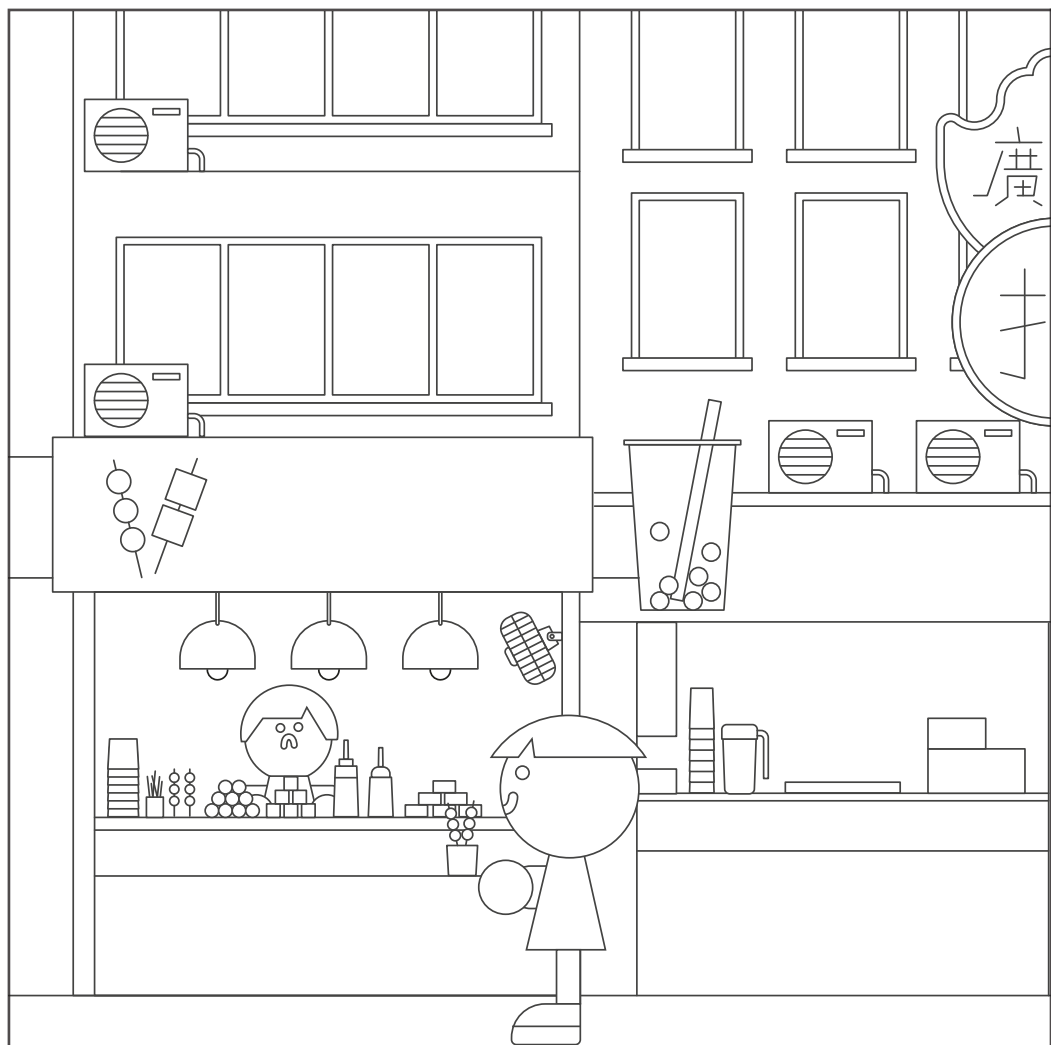

DanDan says, applying the finishing touches to your portrait.

"I'm missing something,"

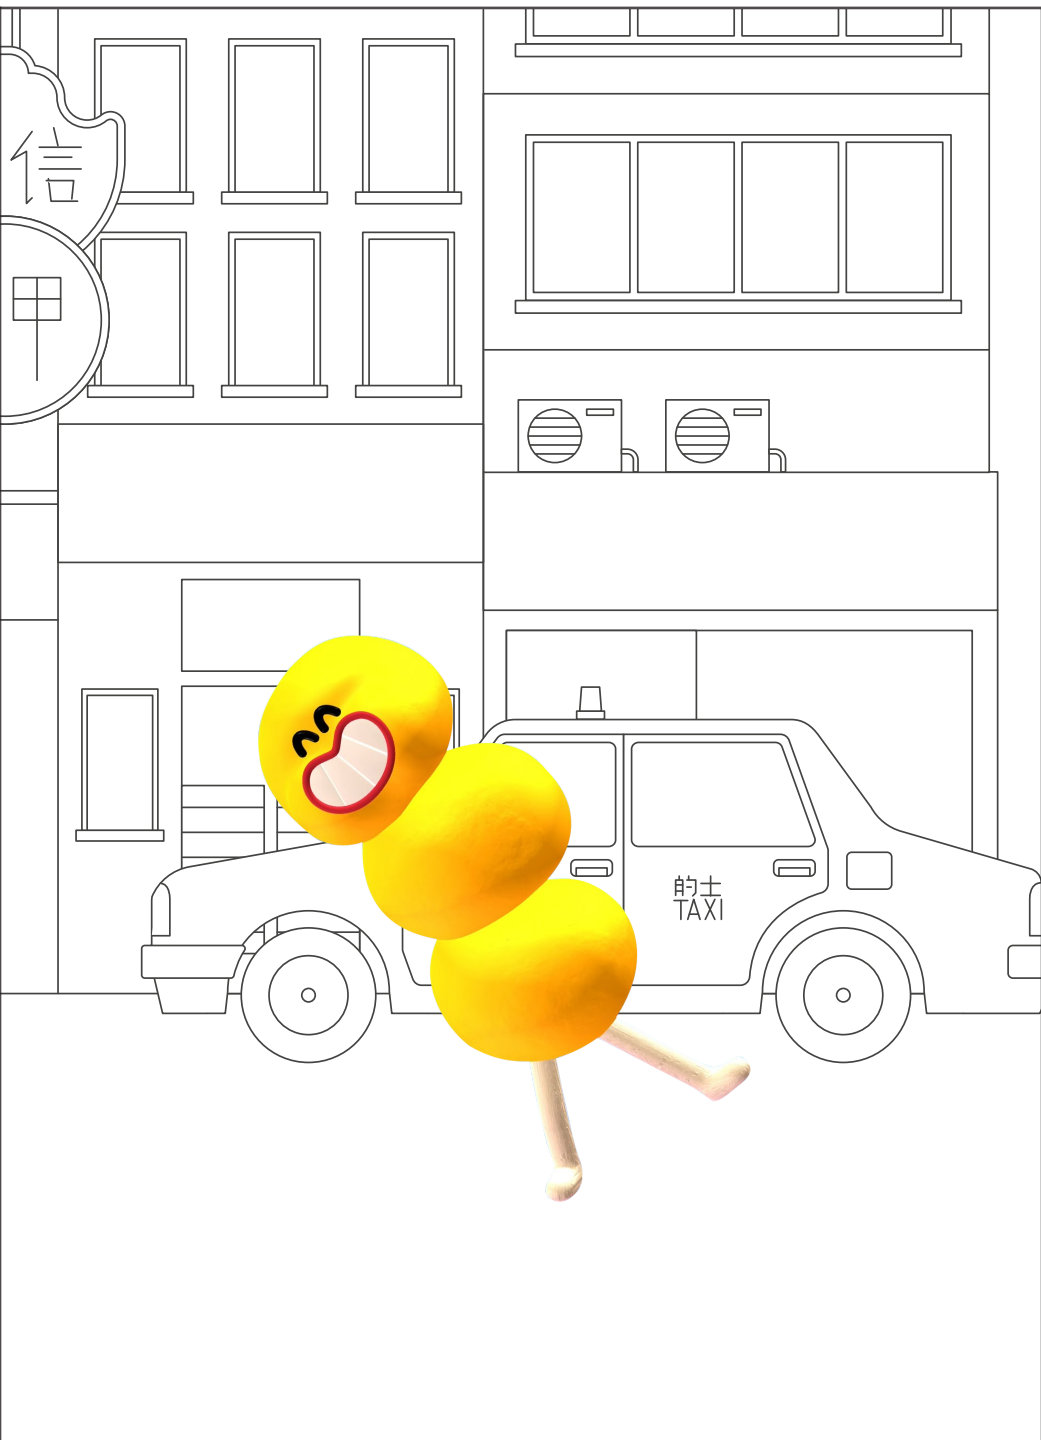

DanDan says in frustration.

Can you help DanDan finish your portrait?

With a final bounce, the portrait is done. “Look like you?”, DanDan asks. “No matter, it was still fun. Remember if you ever feel uneasy come find me. Keep calm and bounce back with this fish ball snack!”.

The quiet of the pier is broken by a howling wind snaking its way through to find you. It touches your neck with a biting cold sending shivers down your spine. A wave crashes with an angry 'slap' followed by a splash 3m high. Maybe it's not the best day to cross Victoria Harbour.

Two ferries are racing toward the pier and with a loud roar from its engine the winner pulls hard to a stop, then gently slides against the pier.

The gangplank crashes down and out runs a ferry boat captain!

"Yes! Ahoy! You are the first passenger in a month. Vic at your service." the captain exclaims.

As you board, Vic says, "This COVID-19. Horrid! I used to have thousands of passengers daily. Now none... well one including you."

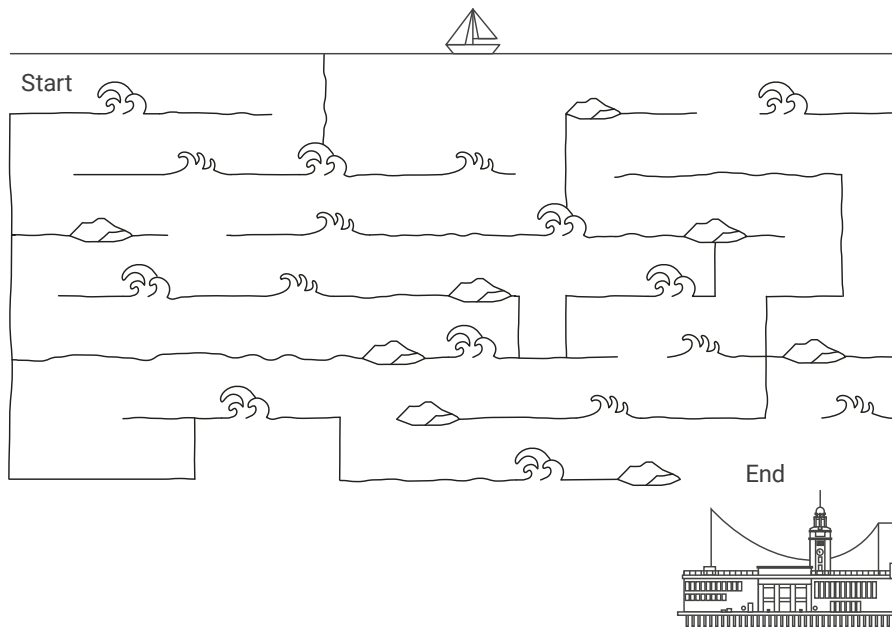

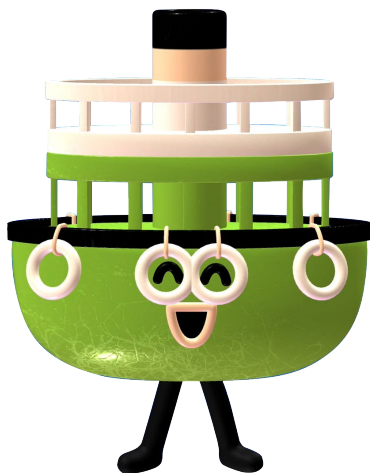

There is sadness in the eyes, an emptiness that comes with being away from the ones you love for too long. But as Vic puts the ferry in gear, happiness is in the air!

The ferry bobs up and down with no control in the rough seas. You're not turning green are you?

"She's rough today!", Vic shouts. "When it's bad like this, best to stay calm. Why don't you help navigate the waves? Let's ride out the rough seas together."

Can you find a safe route to the other side?

The Kowloon pier is in sight. It couldn't have come any sooner with the weather picking up.

"No worries. I'd get you here no matter the weather."

Vic boasts.

A smile grew across Vic's face, a smile so big and bright that for a moment it seemed the sun had come out. Vic was full of pride, another passenger safe on the other side.
