VIDEO SELECTION

Choosing the right videos for Promote

It all starts with the right videos. Outside of needing to be longer than 10 seconds, consider the following to engage your audience:

Relevance to goal

Match your video's content to your goal. For instance, if your goal is to increase channel subscribers, choose a video that showcases the type of content viewers can expect from your channel.

Total video control

Choose any video on your channel regardless of past performance. Whether you want to boost a high-performing video or revive an older one, Promote puts you in control.

Audience appeal

Choose videos that cater to the interests of the audience you want to reach.

Ad policy compliance

All promoted videos must comply with YouTube's video ad policies. Ensure your videos are free of any content that violates these policies, such as inappropriate language, violence, or misleading information.

You'll never be charged more than the total budget you set for your campaign.

Minimum recommendations

You can get results with as little as $5 USD, but we generally recommend at least $100 USD as campaign performance tends to improve over time.

Note: Billing will depend on the settings that are selected in Google Ads with either automatic or manual payments. Visit the Google Ads billing Help Center to learn more.
If you encounter any billing issues or have questions about your payments, you can refer to the Google Ads support team for assistance.

If your campaign isn't reaching the right audience, experiment with different targeting options to refine who you're reaching and improve engagement. For example, if your goal is to reach a wider audience, try expanding your demographics or geotargeting.

Adjust your budget

Based on your campaign's performance, you can adjust your budget to increase or decrease your ad spend.

FAQs

FAQs

How do I get support?

For help with troubleshooting issues in the Studio creation flow, contact our Creator support team^{*}. For all other issues including campaign delivery and billing, contact the Google Ads support team.

Do promotions hurt the organic reach of my channel, or my other videos' performance?

Organic search and discovery on YouTube is based on how content performs when it is recommended, not when it is run as an ad through Promote. Promote is an advertising tool that is meant to be complementary to organic growth. At the same time, it's possible that Promote can have a positive impact on the reach of your channel as it helps you find new audiences who may continue to engage as part of your community.

^{*}Note: Creator support is only available to those in the YouTube Partner Program.

FAQs

Are the subscribers from Promote real?

Yes. Subscribers gained from Promote are real subscribers just like any others. Keep in mind that when we look at eligibility for the YouTube Partner Program, only organic subscribers will be counted to keep an even playing field for those interested in joining the program.

They can receive notifications about your new content, and they can become robust members of your community. A promotion may kickstart a viewer's relationship with your channel, and if you continue to provide content that's interesting and valuable to them, there are plenty of ways for them to engage once they're aware of you.

Why do my promotions run at odd times or mostly in some countries?

In order to ensure consistent campaign performance, you may see your campaign serving in various geographies and at different times of the day due to optimized targeting.

FAQs

How do promotions find the right viewers for my video?

We utilize various signals from both your content and potential viewers to match promotions to viewers.

What's the difference between Promote in YouTube Studio and YouTube Engagements in Google Ads?

The Audience Growth goal in Promote and YouTube Engagements that optimizes for YouTube Channel Subscriptions in Google Ads are the same product. Promote has a different, easier to use interface to make running a campaign easier. Engagements in Google Ads have more robust reporting and campaign settings. Choose Promote if you want a simpler, easier to use offering. If you want deeper insights and more control, use Engagements.

Do subscribers and watch time from ads count toward my YouTube Partner Program goals?

No. Thresholds for the Partner Program are based on organic subscribers and watch time.

FAQs

If subscribers and watch time don't count for YouTube Partner Program eligibility, why would I pay to promote my channel?

While subscribers you gain from ads don't count toward program eligibility, the views, comments, and overall channel engagement create a more robust channel that is more likely to attract future subscribers and brand deals. Some creators promote to increase affiliate sales or website traffic. Others sell their own products or services. Subscribers are powerful, but that isn't the only way to benefit from a larger audience on YouTube.

Promote is an advertising product, and designed to be complementary to organic growth you see on your channel. It can help you discover new audiences and gives you more control over who sees and interacts with your content. Subscribers, views and overall engagement from Promote can make your channel more well-rounded and set you up to grow your audience or business.

FAQs

What do I do if my campaign or account is suspended?

All Promote campaigns must adhere to YouTube's advertising policies and community guidelines. If not, your ads may be disapproved and prevented from running or in severe cases, your ads account may be suspended.

If you believe there's been an error, you can contact support by clicking on one of your promotions and scrolling down to Promotions support.
